AZARIA
Carpentry cadetship

Azaria is doing a cadetship with construction firm, Hawkins.

“It’s pretty intense working in the industry, but I’m definitely in the right place. At the moment I’m working on apartments in Mount Victoria.”

Azaria (Samoan) studied the pre-trade Certificate in Carpentry qualification. “We learnt the basics of carpentry. It got us used to using the tools that I use now on the job.”

“My tutor put my name forward for Hawkins. I did work experience for three weeks and then they hired me.”

“I’d like to encourage more females into trades because our abilities as women are underestimated.”

I received a tools grant which is part of the scholarship

NOAEOE

Plumbing student

Noaese has completed the Level 3 plumbing programme, and has continued onto an apprenticeship.

After finding it difficult at the start, Noaese (Samoan/Tokeauan) came to really enjoy the plumbing programme, and learnt a lot. “I’ve picked up a range of skills this year, including welding, pipe outs, and installing drains.”

“I didn’t know what I wanted to do at the start of the programme, but now I do. I want to work towards becoming a fully qualified plumber.”

Noaese’s mentor praises him for the progress he has made. “He’s found his feet and has set himself goals for the future.”

Through the scholarship all my fees are covered, I’ve gained a drivers licence, and received plenty of support.

JASMINE
Hairdressing apprentice

Jasmine loves working at Colours Hair Design in Plimmerton as a hairdressing apprentice, but hairdressing wasn’t always her first choice.

“It didn’t know exactly what I wanted to do so I thought I’d give hairdressing a go and see how I liked it,” says Jasmine. “The best part is the creative side of hairdressing.”

Through the Māori and Pasifika Trades Training initiative, Jasmine (Ngāti Raukawa) was able to gain an apprenticeship.

“The Māori student mentors would come into class to see how we were going, to catch up and help with things like finding models to practice our work on.”

It reduced my fees significantly which makes a big difference, especially being a student
